PREFACE

By Alex G. Malloy

As perhaps could be expected, this past year has proven to be yet another full of tumultuous changes within the comic book industry; and not all of them good. Last year's trends of plummeting sales of individual titles continues, as virtually every company has experienced a sharp drop off in sales. Comic book stores across the country continue to close their doors even as other shops open for the first time, and sales of back issues continue to be soft.

Perhaps the biggest news of the past year was the plummeting value (or lack thereof), of Marvel's Stock. Early in the year the company went into Chapter 11 to protect its assets, and reorganize. This has caused the company's stock to drop, and as the Fall of '97 approached, the company (which once traded for $60.00 a share), was listed at $1.75 per share, less than its comics, which sell for $1.99. As the year closed out, the mainstream press reported apparent success in Marvel's last–ditch efforts to salvage the company and prevent it from slipping into Chapter 7, where the assets would simply be auctioned off to the highest bidder. If the verbal deal can be reduced to writing, Marvel would be able to deal with the crushing debt load it incurred in buying trading card manufacturers Fleer and Skybox, in part by selling off Panini, which mostly makes stickers.

Meanwhile there were all sorts of reports of in–fighting between owner Ronald O. Perlman, and the stockholders who were attempting to wrest control of the company away from Perlman. These stories (most filtering down to the comic–buying public in the forms of rumors and snippets of half–truths, and misinformation), ran from having Perlman selling off the various characters to numerous different publishers (from DC to Image), to the triumphant return of Jim Shooter to the editor–in–chief position. Only time will tell which were/are true.

Naturally enough, the smaller houses have also had to scale back their operations, Chaos!, Crusade, and numerous other smaller publishers continue to exist, but command a smaller, and smaller percentage of the audience. Which is not to say that Independents are dying out, as every month there seems to be a whole new graduating class of indie comics that are being produced. As a cottage industry, the indies are here to stay, and will continue to become a more significant part of the market in years to come.

Then, of course, there are the deaths in the family, some (perhaps) expected, some not. Curt Swan, long–time Superman artist passed away, as did Marvel Executive Editor, Mark Gruenwald. Gruenwald's ashes were added to the ink used to reprint a bound volume of the Squadron Supreme, as per his will.

Still, all the news out there isn't bad.

Acclaim comics, managed to resuscitate itself with a new management team, and several revamped titles. Marvel kicked off a year–long Heroes Reborn saga with its most popular titles (Captain America, The Avengers, Iron Man, and The Fantastic Four), that was creatively directed and implemented by several of the ex–Marvel/current Image founders. Several comic book movies hit the big screen (Batman & Robin, Men in Black, Spawn, Steel), with mixed results (B&R was slammed; MIB proved to be a certifiable blockbuster; Spawn was praised; while Steel was generally overlooked).

The Acclaim re–rebirth was kicked off with brand–new incarnations of several of their characters, including Turok, XO-Manowar, Solar, Magnus, Eternal Warrior, Ninjack, and others. While these new incarnations proved to be somewhat jarring to those fans who had followed the original incarnations, the books have garnered a new following, and hence, a new lease on life. To these new/old characters, several new titles were added—Quantum and Woody, Troublemakers, Trinity Angels—to name a few.

Marvel's Heroes Reborn kicked off with Jim Lee handling the rebirth, and retelling of the origins of the FF and Iron Man, and Rob Liefeld in charge of Cap. America and the Avengers. The plan was for these two creators to re–introduce and re–tell the first year or so of the origins of this group of characters. While the project was kicked off with a bang, about half–way through it seemed to run into rough waters. First of all, Liefeld and Jim Valentino (who was writing The Avengers), had a falling out (more later), then Marvel gave Liefeld the heave–ho (and turned his two titles over to Lee to complete).

Liefeld, no stranger to controversy himself, had his hands full this year. He was ousted (or quit, depending on who's story you believe), from Image, and, with his two new partners: Scott Rosenberg—the former head of Malibu, and the man who brought Men in Black to the Silver Screen (who had just resigned from Marvel), and Jeph Loeb (Batman, Cable, X–Force, Captain America: Heroes Reborn), formed Awesome Entertainment, and began to produce The Coven, Kaboom, Supreme, and The Fighting American.

Yes, that Fighting American. In a story that was as exciting as it was controversial, Liefeld left Cap. America, and announced that he was planning on issuing his own patriotic character Agent America, this was followed by an announcement that he had cut a deal with Joe Simon and Roz Kirby to produce the Simon/Kirby character, The Fighting American. Needless to say this was followed by the usual saber rattling from Marvel who attempted a lawsuit, only to have it shot down in the court system (see Jeph Loeb interview).

All–in–all, during the calendar year of 1997, the world of comics had—once again—proven to be volatile, thrilling, and exciting. People (both fans and foes), predicted the imminent demise of not only several of the major (and minor), players in the field. There were no major failures of any of publishing houses. Comics continue to publish, magazines about comics continue to publish, and movies, toys, videogames, and other collectibles relating to comic books continue to be licensed and produced.

Is the end of this industry in sight? Who knows? Certainly not us. However, the participants in this industry show every sign of refusing to go quietly into that dark night, and for every nay–sayer, there is at least one individual who still makes the weekly trek to their favorite comic shop to purchase the newest installment of their favorite four–color action hero. Who will win out? Tune in next week, same Bat–time, same Bat–channel.

I must also mention Harry Rinker, Robert J. Sodaro, Jeph Loeb, Mike Gold, Rich Spears and Allan Miller for guidance and talent in making this annual possible.

Last, but not least, to all the writers, artists, letterers, colorists, editors, and all at DC, Marvel, Dark Horse, Image, Malibu, Acclaim-Valiant, Entity Comics, Topps, Warp Graphics, Teckno Comics and Continuity... Hearty Thanks!

THE RISE AND FALL OF ATLAS COMICS

(According to Jeff Rovin)
as told to Robert J. Sodaro

Way back in 1991, seven hot young artists laboring in the vineyards of comics determined that they had had enough with the industry's corporate structure, as well as the work-for-hire contracts under which they had been toiling, and—very vocally—split with the established comic publishing houses. These seven intrepid souls then went off on their own, and did what they wanted to do, which was create and own their own line of comics. These seven were the founding fathers of Image Comics. Two years later history—after a fashion—repeated itself; not once, but twice. Frank Miller, John Byrne and some friends founded Legend, an imprint of creator-owned comics that was distributed through Dark Horse Comics, and Malibu Comics began a line of creator-owned comics entitled Bravura with Walt Simonson, Jim Starlin, Howard Chaykin, and others.

In the interim, Legend and Bravura have ceased to exist (Malibu was sold to Marvel, and while Dark Horse still publishes several of the Legend creators, the "Easter Island" logo no longer appears on the covers). At the time of their foundations, both Miller and Simonson publicly acknowledged their debt and lineage to Image, yet there was another company—out of print since the mid-'70s—that is little known by much of today's comic-buying audience which—in retrospect—is actually a much earlier ancestor of all three companies. That company was Atlas Comics. While the company lasted barely a full year, and none of its books were published for more than five or six issues, the effects of Atlas are still echoing throughout the industry today, more than 20 years after its demise.

The Line-Up

According to Jeff Rovin, co-editor of the line (along with Stan Lee's brother, Larry Lieber), stated that save for the lack of a Direct Market. "...I think we would have been Image Comics." Considering the array of talent that contributed to Atlas, this is no idle boast. A partial list of contributors includes Howard Chaykin, Walt Simonson, Alex Toth, Mike Kaluta, Al Milgrom, Sal Amendola, Steve Ditko, Wally Wood, Neil Adams, Pat Broderick, Marshall Rogers, Pat Boyette, Mike Sikeowski, Pablo Marcus, John Severin, Russ Heath, Frank Thorne, Ernie Colon, Jim Mooney, Larry Hama, Michael Fleisher, Archie Goodwin, John Albano, and Rick Meyers.

According to Rovin, Atlas was founded in 1974 by Martin Goodman, former publisher of Marvel. "I went to work at Atlas in June of '74. At the time, Martin Goodman, who is of course, the founder of Marvel Comics, wanted to publish five color comics, and two black-and-white comics. Even before we started, it became apparent to him that in order to get the rack space we needed, we had to publish more titles than that. We ended up with 20-odd monthly magazines. I was doing about six plus black-and-whites, and Larry Lieber was doing four color books."

Apparently part of the deal when Goodman had sold Marvel Comics to Magazine Management Corporation, was that his son, Chip, would still work there. "It was never clear whether Chip quit, or was fired," Rovin stated, "But when he became unemployed, Martin started Seaboard Periodicals. We also published romance magazines, puzzle books, and a mystery magazine, which was pretty interesting. I don't think Chip's heart was ever into comic books."

In the Beginning

Given the presence of a direct market and the plethora of comic book publishers in 1997, it may be hard to understand that it wasn't always this way. In fact, for quite a significant period of time, there were almost virtually just three comic book publishers, DC, Marvel, and Archie. Between these three giants, they had all but cornered the U. S. market. It was in this atmosphere, that Martin Goodman ventured back into the market after selling off Marvel. Speaking from this historical perspective, Rovin related Atlas' auspicious beginnings; "When we started, there were only two other comic book companies of any significance [producing superheroes], DC and Marvel. There was Gold Key, of course, but they had their niche. Charlton was around, they had their niche. Mike Friedrich was doing his comic books [Star*Reach]."

Other comic companies at the time that were producing non-superhero titles included Warren (where Rovin had been working when he jumped to Atlas), which stuck to black-and-white magazines; Archie, which all but owned the teen-age humor market; and Harvey another kiddy/humor publisher. Needless to say, DC, Marvel, and Archie were the Big Three; commanding the lion's share of the market, with all other publishers comprising the bottom 10% or so.

"Word went out, that anybody who worked for Atlas would not be permitted to work for DC. It scared a lot of artists off." The memo—direct from the office of then VP and editor-in-chief of DC, Carmine Infantino—indicated that a number of benefits would be forthcoming to all freelance writers, artists, colorists, and letterers. These included bonuses, returned artwork and color proofs, rate increases, and reprint rates. However, implicit in the memo, was the restriction that said freelancers were working solely for DC.

Infantino's reason for doing this was plainly obvious to Rovin. "At the time, there was a rather limited pool of talent to draw from. Justifiably he was afraid of loosing writers and artists." Marvel's reaction to the impending birth of Atlas was not as overt. "They had to be careful because of Martin's former relationship there. Also, Stan Lee was very gracious. He made a call very early on, saying he felt there was room for everybody. I don't think it was Stan who decided to flood the market with reprints at that time, and grab up the rack space, but none-the-less that's how Marvel responded."

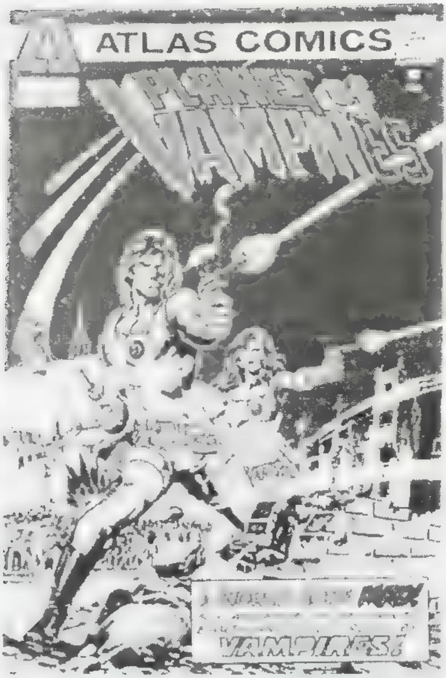
Needless to say, starting up a new color line of Code-approved superhero comics in 1974 was going to be an up-hill battle. Yet, in spite of the odds stacked against them, the Goodmans determined to give it a try. "We had a lot of writers come over and make inquiries," Rovin revealed. "But I think we were used as a lever to get better deals elsewhere." According to Rovin the tide really turned when he managed to convince Howard Chaykin to come on board. "The first artist who joined us was Howie Chaykin. His courage in so doing, was enormous."



Planet of the Vampires #1,

Rovin—who was still working for Warren at the time—approached Chaykin (who had just dropped off a job at the Warren offices), and informed him of the new company. "Howie had just turned in a job that I liked a lot," Rovin related. "I followed him into the elevator and explained to him what was happening. He said, 'Count me in.' He didn't hesitate for a second. I told him we wanted him to do a monthly book, and that he would have complete freedom to do what he wanted to after we hammered out the initial concepts."

Much of Rovin's admiration and regard for Chaykin is a direct result of Chaykin's complete willingness to sign up with the company, given the state of the industry at the time. "He was the first Name we got, period. The fact that he came along and had all this enthusiasm fired up a lot of people. Which I think and I don't want to speak for him, even though I think I'm accurate, I think his levels of enthusiasm are proportionate to his bitterness now about some of it. Because he was so excited. Because it was so free and open, the disappointment we all felt was proportionate to that. I think he certainly took it on the chin that way."

Rovin went so far as to liken the effect of signing Chaykin to work for Atlas to the effect of signing Brando to act in the first Superman movie: it immediate gave Atlas untold credibility with the artistic community, which soon became apparent when Chaykin's contemporaries began to contract for work shortly afterwards. "Walt [Simonson] was with him [in the elevator] at the time, or Bernie Wrightson I forget who. Then Walt came immediately thereafter. He didn't want to do a monthly book. He just wanted to do black-and-white. Whatever else we could come up with. We gave him one story, Gorgo vs. Rodan. We were negotiating with ToHo at the time to do their monsters. However, unfortunately for Atlas, Marvel moved in and bought that out from under them. That was kind of frustrating. We had lots of deals. We had deals to do movie stuff that Chip backed out on, now that I think of it. We were suppose to do Planet of the Vampires: the Movie."

The Atlas Effect

As indicated by the reactions of both Marvel and DC, it was apparent that they were running scared at the birth of Atlas, and to combat the threat of a new publisher of four-color superhero comics, they began to scramble to secure their stranglehold on the marketplace. "We were paying, in some cases, better rates. Certainly to get talent who was reluctant to work with us, we had to pay better rates. Guys like Neil Adams weren't cheap." Among the long-term contributions to the field, that came about as a direct result of Atlas Comics were better working conditions for creators (in the form of returned work and better pay), as well as the beginnings of creator-rights.

"We were single-handedly responsible for artists getting their work back from DC, and for royalties being paid. If you look at Carmine's document, you will see August 13, 1974 in National Periodicals' new program for a broad-range of added benefits, sending out bonus checks, increased rates, artists got their originals back, etc. This was a direct result of our coming into the field, and the fact we were doing that."

Marvel also began to wake up and smell the coffee, although it took a while longer. "Marvel [didn't come around] until Jim Shooter got in there and duked it out. Jim Warren had to do the same things. Artists, I won't say became spoiled, because we weren't around long enough, but they saw it could be different. So they rallied behind people like Neil Adams and became something of a force for creator's rights. Neil was, of course, very active in that at the time. We talked on many occasions on how we could do things better."

One of the other things that Rovin managed to acquire for his team of creators was a partial ownership of the characters on which they worked. "One of the things I had negotiated with Martin, was a partial ownership of all characters, and royalty set-up for the writers and artists. At the time you had to publish three issues before you got sales reports, so I was not around when the sales reports came in, but I subsequently learned that the titles did very well, before they were altered. Theoretically everyone should have been entitled to royalties. We have documents to that effect."

"Unfortunately, not everyone got to sign those documents. Howie, Michael Fleisher, Ernie Colon, and one or two others were the only ones who ever got to sign them. I have a copy of those here. Martin is dead. We can't really confirm what he agreed to with me. It was understood, that if we took these characters and did other things with them, that he would get a percentage of the money. It was a large percent, like 75%, but we would be free to market them elsewhere in other formats. Novelizations, a cartoon series, whatever."

Martin Goodman, who was only interested in the publishing end of things, was apparently not interested in any ancillary rights, So he told Rovin to go ahead and let the creators run with those things. He did, however want the lion's share of the money. "In terms of today's market, 75% corporate ownership is an outrageous sum. In 1974 it was an unprecedented freedom to have.

The Beginning of the End

The seeds of Atlas' destruction were, unfortunately, sown at its birth, for in spite of the major strides the company had initially made, the end was not far off. The fact of the matter is that Chip simply lost interest. I only edited two issues of most of the books before I left. I left in January of 1975, which was not a long time after starting. I'd only done two Scorpions, two Wulf the Barbarian, two Brutes, and two Grim Ghosts.

Wolf the Barbarian #2, © Atlas Comics

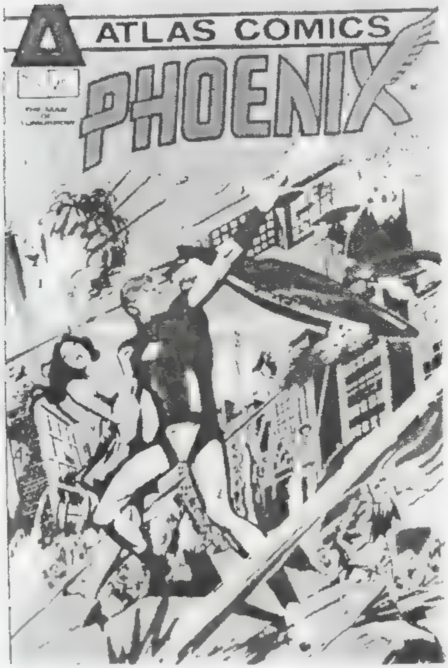
When Martin and Chip saw what Rovin was doing with his books, they got nervous, because they didn't look like Marvel books. It was then that they made a demand. "They demanded that all the books, look, read, and sound like Marvel Comics. They started hiring on their own, all the talent. Some of them were under contract with Marvel and were paid under the table, and worked anonymously. "Without my consent they would redo covers to make them look more like Marvel. Wulf the Barbarian #2 was a beautiful cover, until they cut in some demon woman that didn't belong there."

It soon became apparent to all involved that what had begun as a haven for creators was turning into a third-rate, hack publisher. "I'll tell you what Chip was thinking. The difference in budgeting five titles and budgeting 20-odd titles is considerable. As the money was going out, he started to panic. He started to panic before the sales reports came in, and he just decided to lay the ax to the group, and stop spending. That meant killing the titles." It also meant that writers and artists who had completed work weren't getting paid.

Rovin complained that not only did the Goodmans hire people who were not going to be true to the storylines set-up. They were famous for firing artists they didn't like. "Chip would take home finished material over weekends. Read it, not like it, and not want to pay for it. "That put me in a miserable position. I think Walt might have missed out getting paid on something. It was unbearable to be in that position." Chip even required Rovin to fire art director Steve Mitchell. "Chip never liked him. Chip wanted me to fire him, and I did. Steve is my friend, still, and I have made amends for what I did."

Rovin felt that in order to be able to salvage his relationship with Chip, such as it was—this was in December, towards the end of Rovin's tenure—he had to remove this impediment (Mitchell), which he did. However, Rovin attempted to make an end-run around letting his friend go. "The only way I was able to fire him, was to make sure that he would have enough freelance stuff to make up for the loss of income. Chip agreed to that. Then, Chip started rejecting stories."

Other people that got screwed included Ernie Colon, who, according to Rovin "Got screwed royally..." and since has become one of Rovin's best friends. "Larry Hama's mother was dying. We had to get his book done. I put pressure on him, however tactfully applied, it was still pressure. I've since talked to him about it."



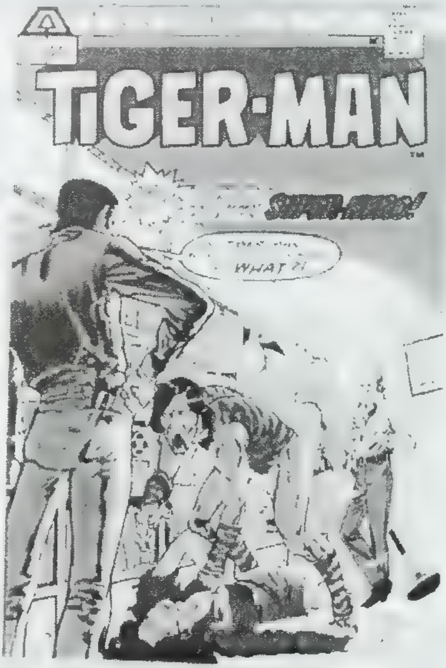
Phoenix #1, © Atlas Comics

Chip even asked Rovin to ask Dick Giordano do redo a cover. "The first Phoenix cover, because disaster stories were big, he wanted to have a city falling down in the background. We went ahead and did that. That was the first sign that we had to watch out for publisher interference. We figured it was an aberration, and let it go." In an effort to save money, Atlas began purchasing artwork from overseas artists, which angered Jim Warren because that practice cut into his talent pool. "That pissed off Jim Warren enormously, and I don't blame him. We were cutting into his market; using some of his artists. It was something that I deeply regret doing. In retrospect, we shouldn't have done the black-and-white magazines. Jim was something of a mentor. He was another one of the people that I would have treated differently in retrospect."

Unable to effect any changes, and unable to produce the kind of comics that he desired to, Rovin left the company early in 1975. As for what became of Atlas/Seaboard—the comic book publisher that could have been a contender—after that; Rovin adds this postscript. "Sometime 1974, Chip bought Swank, the sex magazine. That became his primary focus. That is all that survived in 1975. I don't remember how many years he stayed with that. He has recently been publishing a UFO magazine, and other things."

The Dust at the End of the Trail

When asked about the viability of the line if Chip Goodman had stuck with it a little longer, and allowed Rovin and Lieber to preside over the comics, letting the various creators produce the kind of comics they had set out to produce, he responded in this fashion. "If Chip had just stuck with the original concepts of the characters, I have no doubt that it would have worked." Rovin left the company before the first sales reports became available, but he states that he had gotten word that the books were selling well, and probably would have improved had the editors been free of publisher interference.



TIGER-MAN
SUPER-HERO!
WHAT ?!

Tiger-Man 1, © Atlas Comics

Martin had us put "All new! No reprint!" on the cover. "Marvel was charging 20–25¢ for reprints, and we were charging 25¢ for all-new material. I think Chip got fed up with a lot of the artists. He didn't understand the mentality. He didn't understand why Mike Sikowski felt the need to write 5H17 on the wing of a plane, so it would reproduce to look like the word 'shit', because he didn't like what he was doing. None of us liked The Brute. It was Martin's idea. He wanted to do a character like the Hulk, so we came up with this. He didn't understand why Howard Nostrand, who was a remarkably talented man, would come in and grab Rick [Marshall] by the lapels, and throw him out the door, or over the desk, I forget which." (Apparently Nostrand did this simply because it amused him: Rovin and Lieber allowed the practice to continue so long as it was Marshall and not one of them.)

In spite of all the hardships and aggravation, Rovin remembered the good times. "From June to November, when we were on our own, and just running free, it was magical, and we had a lot of fun." However much Rovin feels that—had they been left alone the line would still be on-going—he likewise feels that there is no way to go back and recreate that magic. "Those characters are very much of the time. I remember, for example, the Grim Ghost, and the Tarantula, both of which were nasty characters. Michael Fleisher really pushed the limits of the Comics Code on that. We had a superhero, or a character (the Tarantula) that was eating people. Pat Boyette, who drew it, brought a real quirky style to color comics."

Rovin felt that there was a whole Saturday Night Live sense of irreverence, and yet affection that was very much of the '70s, for the line. "If you did it now, it would just be more of the escapades of the Grim Ghost, or more adventures of the Scorpion." Rovin attributes this feeling of magic to the dedication, and drive of the creators involved. "We had the kind of dedication from people that was unparalleled in the field. Artists and writers were really busting their backs to do the best work that they could. Walt and Archie Goodwin did an incredible samurai story. New talent was coming to us. Sal Amendola, who had never gotten to do a superhero thing the way he wanted to was getting to do them. Oh yeah, if they had left us alone, we definitely would have been viable."

"Further, in the works were all kinds of comic, and non-comic-related deals; We would have been in on the beginning of the direct market. Plus, I had already signed some book contracts with Citadel Press, and was developing contacts in other fields. We were talking to Otto Preminger—who was around the corner—about motion pictures. All of these things were just getting started when I left, and consequently they died."

These sentiments were echoed in a letter that Ernie Colon had sent to the comic book magazine Amazing Heroes after the magazine had run an article about Atlas. The letter read in part: "About your Atlas Reconsidered article in AH #81, I was surprised at the omission of Jeff Rovin's name... It was his judgment which was mainly responsible for the team of artists who gravitated to Atlas—partly for better rates, partly because they were offered an artistic freedom unknown in the field... It was the tone that Jeff set that gave rise to the creativity that, had top management been more astute, would today have still been viable. Many of the characters birthed during his tenure are still with us, as you noted, under different names... Left to Jeff Rovin and under the fine team he inspired to put out some of the best work they've ever done, Atlas would still be here giving Marvel and DC a damn good run for their money."

Rovin said that, towards the end, his office often seemed the only safe place in the building. "We felt like my office was the Alamo towards the end. We just felt so embattled. So many of the things we wanted to do never got done. It's so heart-breaking to look back. Yet, the record needs to be set straight."

Monkey in the Middle

Rovin indicated that working in a position that requires a person to act as an intermediary between the creators that produce the work, and the Suits that fund it, is often untenable. "I think when somebody is an intermediary between money people and creative people, they're gonna get chewed up. It happened to Bill DuBay [at Warren]. It happened to Jim Shooter [at Marvel], It happened to me [at Atlas]. Both of those people are nothing, nothing, like they've been made out to be, by so many people in the creative community. They are not the beasts and monsters they've been made out to be."

Rovin feels that such people wind up looking two-faced because they are required to play both ends against the middle. "They have to go to the creators and say, 'Yeah okay, I'll take care of your ego,' and then go suck up to the suits and say, 'It's okay. I've got them in line. ' I lunched with Jim [Shooter] about a month ago. We were discussing this very issue. It is simply impossible to please everyone."

What is especially galling to Rovin, is that the stories that circulate always seem to be about atrocities committed by these people and rarely—if ever—are about the enormous good they do. "You don't hear about at Atlas, the artist who was incredibly ill, and had no money, who we advanced money against the job. You don't hear about the other artist who needed a down-payment for his house, so I vouchered stories that he hadn't done yet, knowing that he would, so he could make the down-payment. I did not do any of these without Chip's approval, but I still had to vouch that the work would come in."

Rovin lamented the disparity of this. "You don't hear about Alex Toth being so depressed and having to be nursemaided through the stories. You don't hear about how Bill DuBay and Jim Warren did the same thing with Rick Crandel or Russ Heath You rarely see letters in print from these guys. Somehow people just assume that Larry Lieber did it all, and that Martin Goodman waved his wand, and talented people just came over, which wasn't the case."

JEPH LOEB INTERVIEW

As if the comic book industry didn't have enough scandal this year, Headlines were made when Rob Liefeld, one of the most vocal of the infamous "Image Seven" made a very vocal split with his former partners and co-founders. This announcement was (almost immediately),m followed up by another announcement that he had teamed with Scott Rosenberg and Jeph Loeb to form Awesome Entertainment. Now, virtually everybody in the filed had heard of both Rob and Scott (Rob is...well Rob, and Scott, of course, founded Malibu), so that left people with the question, exactly who is this Jeph Loeb character, and how did he hook up with the other two?

For anyone who still doesn't know who the talented Mr. Loeb is, CVA *managed to catch up with him shortly after the release of three of their titles (The Fighting American, The Coven and Supreme), and he graciously filled us in on his bonafides, as well as the background of the founding of Awesome, as well as some of their future plans*

CVA: So, who are you anyway, and what makes you think you know anything about comics?

Loeb: I'm the mystery guy. (Laughter) Actually, for a long time the primary way I made my living was as a screenwriter and as a producer. I made movies like Teen Wolf with Michael J. Fox and Commando with Schwarzenegger, and I worked again with Schwarzenegger on a little made–for–HBO movie called Christmas in Connecticut. I also have a movie coming out this spring called Firestorm with Howie Long.

CVA: Is that based on the comic book character?

Loeb: No. I've been collecting comics since 1970, and I have this massive collection that my wife wishes was somewhere other than in this house. (Laughter) I just sort of by fluke, being a screenwriter, got an opportunity to write an annual that was then called The Batman Halloween Special, and I thought there was only going to be one of them. Then we did three years, and DC came to us—Tim Sale and I—and asked if we'd take over Batman for a year and so we've been doing this Batman thing. Which brings me all the way back to they asked me to do my bio in the back of the last issue, and for my bio I said I was looking forward to working on Superman, the comic not the movie, and I was looking forward to the release of my feature film, Firestorm, the movie, not the comic. That tells you how my two lives collide. I, as a producer, was involved with setting up motion picture and television properties based on comic books. Reid Flemming, the World's Toughest Milkman, which is a small, independent comic book that is hilarious.

CVA: I Love Reid Flemming! Is that becoming a movie finally?

JL: We're doing our best. It's at Warner Bros. It has a terrific script, and we're just waiting to hear what they have to say.

CVA: Is he still publishing as a comic book?

JL: Actually, David Boswell is self–publishing as an independent out of Vancouver. Actually, he just started again, he had not been publishing for about five or six years.

CVA: I have to find him. I think his is close to the best comic ever published.

JL: Yes, it is so wonderful. So there was that, and there was a little comic called Model by Day that Kevin Taylor was self–publishing out of New York City, and we bought the rights to that and made it into a two–hour pilot with the Bond girl from the last Bond movie, who went on to make a lot of different movies. I worked with Jerry Jones and Will Jacobs on a project called Trouble with Girls, because I love Girls…Girls, the book…and it just sort of started, more and more, the two worlds, were overlapping on each other. I was looking for an opportunity to find financing in order to start a new company that was to very different from the way other companies were run. Scott Rosenberg was looking to finance a new company, and Rob Liefeld was looking to expand beyond where he had gone with Extreme. It purely was more serendipity than anything else. I can't really explain it, there are so many places where the worlds intercept each other.

CVA: What other comics have you worked on?

JL: I went to go work at Marvel Comics, and the two books I worked on were Cable and X–Force, which were Rob's creations. I ran into Rob about a year–and–a–half ago at the Oakland WonderCon, and I had no idea whether or not he knew who I was, and second of all, I had no idea whether or not he was going to say to me "So, you're the bastard who's been killing Cable." Quite the contrary, he was very complimentary to me and we just hit it off. He, at the time, was just about to begin Captain America; Heroes Reborn, and I so wanted to be part of that project. I knew it was going to be the biggest story of the year, and I knew it was going to become exactly what it became; which was extremely controversial, but at the same time very, very successful. One night about a month later I got a call from Rob, and he wanted to know whether or not I wanted to come on board. What I love, is what he said is "How would you like to join Waterworld?" and I asked him what he meant, and he said "We're the most despised, worst reviewed comic book and no one has ever seen a page of it. Referring to fact that everyone hated Waterworld even before it came out.

CVA: I thought that Waterworld was not an incredibly awful film, and was in fact a decent film. In fact, I think that it is incredibly ballsy of Acclaim to publish a comic based on a movie that was so universally reviled.

JL: And yet, I'm sure that there were people out there who saw it and liked it. And, that was sort of the attitude I took I had admired what Rob had accomplished and wanted to see what it was like. We sort of both agreed that if it was a disaster after the first issue we would—at the end—both shake hands, and go our ways. After the first issue I not only wanted to do that, I wanted to do the Avengers. He and Jim Valentino had a parting of the ways [and he offered me the book]. The next six months was about the most fun and most aggravating experience that either one of us had ever had. We were having a great time making these comics and working with some of the most talented people in the business; from Richard Starkings who did the lettering to all the people who worked at Extreme Color, to Ian Churchill, Rob, and all these people who were having just a great time. We were having a good time. Marvel was all of a sudden…it was like dad came home and pulled the plug. You know, "You're now supposed to be watching television after 11:00. It was really very, very strange. The books were selling very well, and aside from the fact that it was clearly so embarrassing for the people at Marvel because we were these bandits out there on the range, making better comics that they were making. I think that someone had to put an end to it, and they did. So, there we were without really much idea to what we were going to do, it all sort of very quickly came together. Scott completed his sale of Malibu to Marvel, and he and I had been talking, and he and Rob sat down again, and the next thing we knew, this is what we were going to do. It was always going to be that Rob was going to work with Scott on finding a larger partner to fully integrate the company and to fully finance the company, and we sort of expected that at the end of the first year. Six weeks after we opened our doors, a company called Crossroads, which does film, software, and music financing called and wanted to be in the publishing business. The next thing we knew we were sold. We were fully financed and we had a really top-flight, brilliant man by the name John Hyde, and Ann Jacobus, who's our general councilor, and den mother. We all just became this new family. What happened with Scott, is that Scott profited enormously, as he is wont to do, and Scott still maintains a consultant basis with the company and is involved in´the motion picture end of things. He just put together Men In Black and a movie that will be out in two years that is called Cowboys and Aliens. So here we were, married to a new company, that completely believed in the philosophy that we had set out to do. That philosophy is that we want to make the best comics that we can. But we also see that, given the current environment, comics cannot exist publishing by themselves, or, you'll go under. It's been proven time and time again, by the young start–up companies. The answer as wee see it, is to create properties that make really good movies, and really good toys, and really good television shows, but is still very, very respectful of the comic book industry. So that if, there are those purists out there who believe that comic books shouldn't be made into movies—to them we say, "Well then, buy our comics, have a good time, and don't go to the movies."

CVA: And there have been so many silly movies based on comic books that have been made over the years.

JL: Right, and my attitude—and its funny, because I was just having this conversation the today—and they were saying that there are so many terrible movies, why don't you just concentrate on making comic books. My response to them was very simple. I said, "Look, you don't have to go to the movies." That's the first thing, You always have the comic books, no one is going to take them away. The question I want to put forward is, when was the last time that you heard that a comic book got canceled because of a bad movie? I said, actually, more often than not, an awful lot of comic books get a second lease on life simply because there is a movie based upon them. I don't think that Dark Horse—and I don't know this for a fact—but my guess is that Dark Horse would not have continued to publish The Mask, had it not been such a phenomenally successful movie. I think that The Crow is another example of that. No one had any interest in Men in Black, and now there's a tremendous interest in doing a Men in Black comic book. I do think that it is a double–edged sword…

CVA: …And certainly Captain America and the Punisher didn't cease being comic books because they were turned into a pair of ghod–awful movies.

JL: No, Punisher sort of ran out of steam on its own. I think that a lot of it has to do with execution, and a lot of it has to do with the people that are involved. One of the things that make our company fairly unique, is that when you think of all of the people in the comic book business, the person who has been the most successful at translating properties into motion picture properties, is Rob, and while a number of the things that he has worked on, have not seen screen yet, when they do, it will come fast and furious, and people will start going "Wow!" In terms of understanding the business, and in terms of creating new material, and in terms of having unbridled enthusiasm—that part about Rob I really admire. It is always so funny, because whoever I talk to, eventually they do come around to it. They say, "No matter what else you think of Rob..." as if I partnered with some sort of serial killer. (Laughter) "Oh yeah, there was those 10 people in Dallas, but other than that...and he really hasn't killed anybody in a long time." The funny part about it is that I've never had any of the experiences that people have claimed to have had; and I've been with this man for the better part of a year and a half. If we have not been together, we have spoken every day, and I keep waiting to see this "other person" that everyone keeps describing to me. Either this person existed prior to my being involved in his life, or it simply is a side of his that I've never seen of him. The only thing that I know is that we have a company that is built on three premises—aside from the idea that we are looking for properties that will work in other media. The first is that we are all sort of have been abused in some way, at some point in the system, and are looking to have the artistic and editorial freedom to do what we want to do, and to make the mistakes that we want to make. It is sort of funny that we have sort of found each other in that way. I think it is well documented Alan Moore's unhappiness with the various companies that he's worked with, and he finds a very happy home with us. We're extremely fortunate to have him. Look at the two young artists that we have working for us now, Ian Churchill, who does The Coven for us, and Jeff Matsuda, who does Kaboom for us. Both of whom were at Marvel for a long time, and both of whom were looking for a new place to go.

Coven #1, © Awesome Entertainment

CVA: So, what's it like working over in the Awesome offices?

JL: It is just sort of a repeated kind of place to go, and have fun, and behave silly. I don't want to say in any way that it is comparable, but it is—in reading the early Marvels—I really strongly remember those Marie Severin drawings of Stan and Jack jumping over tables at each other wearing Galactus helmets and throwing fireballs at each other while Roy Thomas was hiding under the table and someone was running down the hall screaming and yelling because something else was on fire. That's sort of the way our office runs. We just sort of have this great time running around screaming and yelling and trying to think, well, why not do that? What is the down side of doing that? We're such a small operation, that there is no committee, and there's no "Well, we have to do a P&L and see whether or not that works and..." just sort of look at things and just run things by the seat of our pants. For that, I think that that spirit of entrepreneuralism and that spirit of go by the seat of your pants is what Rob infuses in the company. I tend to be much more conservative in my thinking and what I would do, and Rob is a great believer in, "Just light the match, and see what happens." So we make a very good team: he is extraordinary at being able to come up with concepts, and I'm pretty damn good at execution. Between the two of us we've been able to put out only a few books here at the beginning, but we're very proud of the work that we've done and—I think—a number of people are surprised by it. That to me was always the thing I found surprising was that when The Coven came out, the number of, and I mean literally hundreds of letters and phone calls, mostly calling to say, "This is such a beautiful book. How did you do it?" Rob and I look at each other and say, this is what we want to do. We just haven't had either the financing or the patience, or the wherewithal, or someone as talented as Ian who could do. It was one of the other things that was important to us when we started the company. Rob was very, very lucky in the five years at Extreme to have a number of young artists to come through the system. Rob believed in that system, and believed very strongly in the idea of giving somebody that had never had a chance before whether it was Anthony Winn or Chap Yaep or Matsuda or Chris Lightner, or a number of people along the way who passed through the halls of Extreme; who then went on to greater glory working at the Marvel offices. Particularly in the X–Men office, especially in the X–Men office you know how particular they are up there.

CVA: Let's talk a little about The Fighting American if we could.

JL: We were terminated off Captain America for low sales, which—to me—is sort of like saying to a cow "I am no longer going to use you because give milk." But, such is the nature of the business and that's fine, and so Rob came to me and we started talking about what we were going to do next and Rob had actually planned on doing another project which is a project that I think we're going to do next year. He just kept drawing, and he kept drawing this patriotic figure. He kept saying, "I'm looking around me and seeing the success of Independence Day, and the success of Air Force One, I'm looking at the success of all these movies where patriotism has such a very strong theme and. I don't see any reason why we shouldn't be able to our own character." It may not have been the best idea, but some of the best ideas have sometimes come out of the not so good ideas. The idea was to try to create a new character not unlike the Superpatriot, The Shield, or USA. There have been a lot of patriotic characters out there, so why shouldn't Rob have a patriotic character? So Rob created a character called Agent America, and almost immediately people with torches came to the house, and said, "You can do a lot of things in this world, but that's not something that you can do." One of the parties that came to the door interestingly enough was Joe Simon, who called and said, "I really like what it is that you guys have in mind, why don't you guys do the Fighting American?" We were so stunned. It was as if we decided to do a story about a guy who could fly, was impervious to bullets, and could leap over buildings and all of a sudden we got a call from Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster saying, "You know, instead of doing Superduper, why not do whatever the heck they called were calling Superman before he was Superman. In this particular case we actually had a character that had been in existence since 1954. He actually co–existed with Captain America, which really made it very interesting from our point of view.

CVA: So, how has it been working with Joe?

JL: Joe is great, he was aggressive, funny, and bright. He's however years old and he coordinated with Roz Kirby, who is in charge of Jack's estate. The next thing we know, we took most of the ideas that were Agent America, and abandoned them and started over again. We were happily going our own way, and a week before publishing we got served [by Marvel]. Marvel had decided that they would sue us for copyright infringement.

We sort of said that they took an awful lot of time to do this, but this is the decision that they wanted to do. Their first step was to try and get a temporary restraining order, and we showed up in court to contest it, they withdrew. They then decided that what they wanted to do was get a preliminary injunction which would have stopped us from publishing. The judge heard a number of arguments and the judge decided there was no basis for this, but left open the door that Marvel could go to trial. The concept that Marvel would continue was beyond me particularly for a company that is such financial bad shape. The enormous amount of money that it would take to go to trail, but if that's what they are going to do, that's what they are going to do. In the mean time we're going to continue to publish The Fighting American.

CVA: You must obviously be pleased that it went in your favor then.

JL: Of course that was an enormous relief to have someone outside of ourselves to look at the material and say that there does not seem to be confusion and these two characters have peacefully existed for 43 years, it seems to the State of New York that Marvel you don't have a case and you guys can publish your book. So we did. I just found out today that we sold out. The book only came out on Thursday. And Again, I know that there is an awful lot of people out there who say its not possible, or whatever, and I can just assure them that my mom, and Rob's mom have not bought all tne copies and hidden them in the house. (Laughter) What we set out to do is do a book that is great fun. A book that was the adventures of a patriotic figure who had no direct affiliation with anyone else. Captain America came with a lot of baggage. He was so identified with the government and being the symbol of America; whereas the Fighting American was just a guy who was a fighting American. Which meant that he could get away with a lot more than Captain America could.

CVA: What did you do—if anything—to bring him into the '90s?

JL: He had had a sidekick named Speedboy; we decided to update that to a sidekick named Spice, who is a state–of–the–art android that is capable of…as she refers to herself, she's a state–of–the–art weapon of mass destruction. They have a very antagonistic relationship to each other, which we also thought was interesting, between a 13 year–old girl, and a 20–something/30–something man who—at this point in his life, would rather just be left alone. He had been the Fighting American in the 1950s something happened, which is sort of the mystery of his life—he decided that he didn't want to be the Fighting American any longer. Now his main villain has come back and has created such massive destruction that he had to come back too, and has been assigned by the government this robot sidekick, who he would just a soon see disassembled and moved out of the way. They have a very Paper Moon kind of relationship with each other.

CVA: Who are the creative personnel on the book?

JL: Rob is doing the first two issues, and then we're going to be doing four–issue arcs. The next four–issue arc is going to be by Ed McGuinness who was doing Deadpool for Marvel, and left Marvel to work for us; and Stephen Platt who had his heart broken, because he really wanted to draw Captain America more than anything else in the world, and did not get that opportunity because Marvel pulled the plug is going to do the next arc, and then I think we'll go back to McGuinness again and we'll trade back and forth between McGuinness and Plat. Both of them have very different styles which, I think, will make the book even more interesting to look at. That's what we have planned for The Fighting American.

CVA GRADING GUIDE

In David Brin's science fiction–fantasy novel, The Practice Effect, things improve with use. You start with a crudely made tool and keep using it until it becomes a fine instrument. If our world worked that way, you could read your golden age comics as often as you liked and they would just get better looking each time. Unfortunately, our world does not work that way, and reading your comics (along with just about everything else) causes comics to deteriorate.

Even if you could protect your comics from external light, heat, cold, moisture, pressure and everything else, you couldn't protect them from their own paper. Most comic books were printed on pulp paper, which has a high acid content. This means that the paper slowly turns brittle with age, no matter what you do to it, short of special museum-style preservation.

Very old, well-preserved comics are coveted collector's items. In most cases, people did not save their comic books for future generations. They read them and discarded them. Comic books were considered harmless ephemera for children. When these children outgrew their comics, their parents often threw them away. If everybody kept all of their comics, comics would not be valuable because everybody would have them scattered about the house!

The value of any comic depends on scarcity, popularity and condition. Scarcity increases with age and popularity depends on the whim of the public — only condition automatically decreases with age. Newer comics are generally available in near-mint condition, so newer comics in lesser condition have little collector potential. However, older comics are scarce, so they are still collectible in less than near-mint condition, but the value is obviously less. This is a basic tenet of all collectibles. A car is more valuable with its original paint. A baseball card is more valuable if it has not been marred by bicycle spokes. Coke bottles, stamps, coins, and toys in good condition are all more valuable than their abused counterparts. Comic books are no exception.

New comic book collectors should learn how to assess the prospective value of a comic in order to protect themselves from being fleeced by unscrupulous dealers or hucksters. Yet, a majority of dealers, especially store owners, can be considered reliable judges of comic grade. Because comic retail may be their primary source of income, certain dealers are particularly adept at noticing comic book imperfections, especially in issues they intend to purchase. As such, hobbyists and collectors must understand that dealers need to make a minimum profit on their investments. Buying collectible comics entails certain risks. Therefore, dealers must scrutinize a comic to determine if the particular book will stand a chance of resale. Well-preserved comics are invariably more desirable to dealers because they are more desirable to collectors.

There are eight standard comic grades: mint, near mint, very fine, fine, very good, good, fair, and poor. Clearly, these eight grades could be split into even finer categories when haggling over an exceptionally rare or coveted Golden Age comic. In most cases, however, comic books can be evaluated using these eight standard grades. The values listed in Comics Values Annual are all for comics in "Near Mint" condition. The grading/price chart given at the back of this book should be used to adjust this price for comics in different grades.

Mint

Finding new comics in true mint condition can be difficult. Finding old comics in mint condition is almost impossible. Mint condition comics usually fetch prices higher than price guide listings. Mint comics can sell for 120% or more of Comics Values Annual listed prices. The reason for this is the strict criteria reserved for mint comics.

Mint comics are perfect comics and allow no room for imperfections. Pages and covers must be free of discoloration, wear, and wrinkles. A mint comic is one that looks like it just rolled off the press. Staples and spine must meet perfectly without cover "rollover." The cover must be crisp, bright, and trimmed perfectly. The staples must not be rusted and the cover should not have any visible creases.

The interior pages of a mint comic are equally crisp and new. A mint comic must not show any signs of age or decay. Because of the paper stock used on many older comics, acid and oxygen cause interior pages to yellow and flake. It is much harder to find pre-1970 mint comics because of inferior storage techniques and materials. In the early days of collecting, few people anticipated that the very boxes and bags in which they stored their comics were contributing to decay. Acid from bags, backing boards, and boxes ate away at many comics.

Near Mint

A near mint comic and a mint comic are close siblings, with their differences slight, even to an experienced eye. Most of the new comics on the shelf of the local comic shop are in near mint condition. These are comics that have been handled gingerly to preserve the original luster of the book.

Near mint comics are bright, clean copies with no major or minor defects. Slight stress lines near the staples and perhaps a very minor printing defect are permissible. Corners must still be sharp and devoid of creases. Interior pages of newsprint stock should show almost no discernible yellowing. Near mint comics usually trade for 100% of the suggested Comics Values Annual listed prices.

Very Fine

A very fine comic is one that is routinely found on the shelves and back issue bins of most good direct market comic shops. This grade comic has few defects, none of them major. Stress around the staples of a very fine comic are visible but not yet radical enough to create wrinkles. Both the cover and interior pages should still be crisp and sharp, devoid of flaking and creases. Interior pages may be slightly yellowed from age.

Most high-quality older comics graded as very fine can obtain 80-90% of Comics Values Annual listed prices. Newer comics graded as very fine get about 70-85% because many near mint copies probably exist. Despite that, very fine comics are desirable for most collectors.

Fine

Fine comics are often issues that may have been stored carefully under a bed or on a shelf by a meticulous collector. This grade of comic is also very desirable because it shows little wear and retains much of its original sharpness. The cover may be slightly off center from rollover. The cover retains less of its original gloss and may even possess a chip or wrinkle. The comers should be sharp but may also have a slight crease. Yellowing begins to creep into the interior pages of a comic graded as fine.

Fine comics are respectable additions to collections and sell for about 40-60% of the listed prices.

Very Good

A very good comic may have been an issue passed around or read frequently. This grade is the common condition of older books. Its cover will probably have lost some luster and may have two or three creases around the staples or edges. The corners of the book may begin to show the beginnings of minor rounding and chipping, but it is by no means a damaged or defaced comic. Comics in very good condition sell for about 30-40% of Comics Values Annual listed prices.

Good

A good comic is one that has been well read and is beginning to show its age. Although both front and back covers are still attached, a good grade comic may have a number of serious wrinkles and chips. The corners and edges of this grade comic may show clear signs of rounding and flaking. There should be no major tears in a good comic nor should any pages be clipped out or missing. Interior pages may be fairly yellowed and brittle. Good comics sell for about 15-25% of the Comics Values Annual listed prices.

Fair

A fair comic is one that has definitely seen better days and has considerably limited resale value for most collectors. This comic may be soiled and damaged on the cover and interior. Fair comics should be completely intact and may only be useful as a comic to lend to friends. Fair comics sell for about 10-20% of the Comics Values Annual listed prices.

Poor

Comics in poor condition are generally unsuitable for collecting or reading because they range from damaged to unrecognizable. Poor comics may have been water damaged, attacked by a small child, or worse, perhaps, gnawed on by the family pet! Interior and exterior pages may be cut apart or missing entirely. A poor comic sells for about 5-15% of the Comics Values Annual listed price.

Sniffing Out Grades

Despite everything that is mentioned about comic grading, the process remains relative to the situation. A comic that seems to be in very good condition may actually be a restored copy. A restored copy is generally considered to be in between the grade it was previous to restoration and the grade it has become. Many collectors avoid restored comics entirely.

Each collector builds his collection around what he believes is important. Some want every issue of a particular series or company. Others want every issue of a favorite artist or writer. Because of this, many collectors will purchase lower-grade comics to fill out a series or to try out a new series. Mint and near mint comics are usually much more desirable to hard-core collectors. Hobbyists and readers may find the effort and cost of collecting only high-grade comics financially prohibitive.

Getting artists or writers to autograph comics has also become a source of major dispute. Some collectors enjoy signed comics and others consider those very comics defaced! The current trends indicate that most collectors do enjoy signed comics. A signature does not usually change the grade of the comic.

As mentioned, comic grading is a subjective process that must be agreed upon by the buyer and seller. Buyers will often be quick to note minor defects in order to negotiate a better price. Sellers are sometimes selectively blind to their comic's defects. Comics Values Annual: 1998 provides this grading guide as a protection for both parties.

CVA GRADING GUIDE

Grading comics is an objective art. This grading guide outlines the many conditions you should look for when purchasing comics, from the highest grade and top condition to the lowest collectible grade and condition. Your own comics will fall into one of these categories. A more complete description and our comments on comics grades can be found inside. We would like to point out, however, that no reader or advertiser is required to follow this or any other standard. All prices in Comics Values Annual are for comics in Near Mint condition. Happy collecting!

Mint: Perfect, pristine, devoid of any trace of wear or printing or handling flaws. Covers must be fully lustrous with sharply pointed corners. No color fading. Must be well centered. Many "rack" comics are not "Mint" even when new.

Near Mint: Almost perfect with virtually no wear. No significant printing flaws. Covers must be essentially lustrous with sharp corners. Spine is a tight as new. In older comics, minimal color fading is acceptable, as is slight aging of the paper. Most price guides, including CVA, quote prices in this grade.

Very Fine: Well preserved, still pleasing in appearance. Small signs of wear, most particularly around the staples. Most luster is readily visible. Corners may no longer be sharp, but are not rounded. Typical of a comic read only a few times and then properly stored.

Fine: Clean, presentable, with noticeable signs of wear. Some white may show through enamel around staples, and moderate rounding of corners. No tape or writing damage. Book still lies flat.

Very Good: A well worn reading copy with some minor damage such as creasing, small tears or cover flaking. Some discoloration may be evident, with obvious wear around the staples. Little luster remains, and some rolling of the spine may be seen when comic is laid flat on the table.

Good: A fully intact comic with very heavy wear. Tears, cover creases and flaking, and rolled spine will all be evident. No tape repairs present. Only very scarce or valuable issues are collected in this state.

The adjoining price table shows the prices for the other collectible grades which correspond to any "near mint" price given in this book.
